Harry K. Thaw is one of the remarkable men of the day. He can be sane or insane whichever best suits the demand of the occasion. When he was tried for the murder of Stanford White he saw death staring him in the face, and preferred to be crazy, accordingly he was placed in an asylum for criminal lunacy. He killed a man in cold blood he chose to call that insanity; now he sees a chance for liberty and he is sane. Had he been some poor laborer instead of a New York millionaire, he would have been a criminal, and have paid the penalty, long since, and little would have been heard of the unwritten law, or his dementia Americana. Truly it is not a disgrace to the State; and it appears that the prison doors will at length "open to golden keys."

Representative Ben Johnson has discovered many objectionable features in the tobacco schedule. He says that it will be practically useless to the grower in its present shape. The most objectionable part of the bill is that no one can manufacture tobacco or make snuff for himself; not even from tobacco grown by himself and it is emphasized that one can "twist" tobacco even for his own use, and of his own growth without putting himself under the ban of being a manufacturer. Mr. Johnson has gone before the committee with the hope of having corrections made.

This one can never judge as to the amount of tobacco that will be offered for sale by appearances early in the season; it is being forcibly demonstrated at the present time. Thousands of acres of tobacco in the Dark District. At present the prospect for a large crop is not as flattering as it was. The continuous wet weather has prevented the proper cultivation of tobacco as well as other crops and the tobacco in patches that have received some cultivation is not thriving as tobacco is wont to do on our soil.

The announcement of John O. Polin as a candidate for Magistrate subject to the action of the Democratic party appears in this issue. Mr. Polin has served the people of the county in this official position for eight years and has made a careful and discreet official.

Hints For the Orchard.

Cut off at any time any suckers you find growing at the foot of fruit trees or on the trunk or main limbs where branches should not grow.

Muzzle the horses and put the outside portions of the fruit trees under when cultivating the orchard, thus avoiding all bruised and "harmed" trees.

Pay an occasional friendly visit to the little trees set this spring. Rub off unnecessary sprouts and make sure that no bad wires have been left on the trees to choke them.

No grain or crop crops in the young orchard, please; cultivation is best. Stir the soil every two weeks until August. It is a good plan to throw two or three barrels of manure around each tree after rain—Farm Journal.

Remedy For Cows.

Notate the cow, as cowpox is contagious and may be spread from cow to cow by the milkers. There is no preventive of cowpox where cows have been exposed. Treat by giving a full dose of the system called at the onset of the attack and following with a half-cure dose of hypophosphate of soda night and morning in the feed or drinking water. Sprinkle the udder twice daily with a solution of one ounce of hypophosphate of soda in a quart of water and then pinch sore with glycerine of tannin. A sterilized syringe may be used to withdraw the milkers. The discharges extra sore and inflamed, but the tube must be held and laved before each use, else it will do much more harm than good—Brewer's Gazette.

Look to the Calf's Shoulders.

The hump and hump of a young cow are more tender than those of an old cow. If the shoulders of the young horse are allowed to become sore during the first season's work it is likely that they will be sore or tender all the rest of the animal's life.

If the young horse passes through the first season's work with the shoulders sore and tender, it will be sore and tender all the rest of its life.

Miss Mayme Donnelly returned to her home near Springfield.

HER TRUE MUSIC.

The Surprise That Came After the Lovers Were Engaged.

By BETTINA MAYHEW.
Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

"St. James' park? Pardon me. Can you direct me to the Woodson residence?"

The park's flock that had descended the sound of the singer, hence the two clerical looking gentlemen had observed at close range for some time the girl in the swing before either of them spoke.

For a minute a positive face, framed by a big hat, lifted, and a pair of glowing blue eyes traveled with slow deliberation from one to the other before they met.

"The girl, first turn to the left." Then she resumed her book, the wide hat drooping so that the meet outlines of chin and neck peeped from below the edge of the brim.

"A pretty hat and a pretty girl," the Rev. Paul Preyer meditated, "and a picture worth remembering."

Two hours later from the landing of the stairs his eyes caught the sun hat, entirely at home on the rack in the Woodson hall. He knew it instantly. By no chance could there be two such hats. It was indeed a crown, a mass of white poppies, with dark hearts—one of those articles, in fact, which proclaim their love for the personality of the wearer.

"Perhaps the graystone, with its web of dull green and gray creepers and its pure than full spots of moss, sunny and conspicuous or unexpected and shadowy, had something to do with the hat." Paul thought. At all any rate, before he stirred from the landing the pretty girl in white, with the glowing blue eyes, had responded to his imagination by assuming the proportions of his ideal—a Portia, a veritable Portia.

What was that? The Rev. Paul derived a pleasurable shock from an inspired guess. Who else, indeed, but Ada, stepdaughter to his sister, Mrs. Sara Woodson? Quite distinctly he recalled a forgotten fact. There had been in the time of the marriage mention made of a child. That, of course, was years ago. She was now probably well grown.

Had been in college then, afterward traveling abroad. Returning, he had immediately settled into a parsonage that had taxed his powers to the uttermost. The young man, his sister and all outside of duty had gone from him with an unexpected and a great deal of his own people. He turned in his seat to watch her, the rosy skin of hands and arms showing through the meshes of her gloves as she turned the leaves of the hymn book. She found the place precisely, offering him a half smile, and then an upward glance and little dimples showing about her lips.

Then they rose with the congregation. A minute after he stopped singing in the middle of a verse the better to listen—

"Trill forth the psalms divine And crown thy Lord of all."

The Rev. Paul withstood the flood of his small memory then joyfully, in prayer, he knelt before the sun of the singer. The tenderness, the pathos, the love, his spiritual vocabulary held not the words to express the wealth of his ideals of womanhood and in telephonic whet down in a very stroke of regularity. The lesson came with the middle spirit and the sun of music far, far more than suited. For ten minutes indeed was he in a state of spiritual exaltation.

They walked across the park in silence. At the swing the Rev. Paul stopped.

"It was here, Ada," he said, "that I first saw you. I love you, dear, more than anything in the world. I want you to be my wife."

Ada did not at once turn. Her shoulders heaved, and a small handkerchief with colorfully lace was in requisition. Presently from behind its daintiness came a muffled voice, "I—I know—do—little."

"It makes not the slightest difference," he urged. "Ada, just one word!"

"If you're sure."

"I'm sure! I'm as sure of life!" The engagement was necessarily brief. The very next day it was announced. The Rev. Paul, sitting alone when the mail was brought in, glanced over the papers. Almost in a second the notice met his eyes—the usual form, just—what?

He began up electrified. He took each sentence, now the had given up with him—Sara told.

"Miss Woodson is not only strikingly beautiful," he read, "but she is a woman of rare attainments, having but recently returned from a two years' postgraduate course abroad in the best institutions open to women. The Rev. Mr. Preyer ought to consider himself a lucky man."

There was a rush of feet, then clapping hands caught his and pretty lips close to his ear demanded forgiveness. "I couldn't help it," she murmured. "The temptation was too great. You did so look the grave and reverend saint!"

Pat's Narrow Escape From Burning. On his first appearance in Moscow an exciting event occurred. Just previous to going on to the platform I approached the choral glass in my dressing room to arrange the blossoms in my hair, when the long music skirts I was wearing suddenly caught fire from a spirit lamp. Fortunately I had the presence of mind to keep perfectly still while those in the room extinguished the flames with rugs and shawls. The danger was over, and I naturally felt upset, but managed to make my appearance and sing my role in the play. However, on returning to the dressing room the excitement was too much and caused a contusion for pieces of curling the fire had spared, which were carried off as trophies—Adeline Patti in Strand Magazine.

Uncle Sam Rejects Own Stamps. Thomas A. Dally, an Indianapolis lawyer, was laughing at himself the other day for sending stamps to the government at Washington in payment for a patent circular. A few days later he received a letter stating that stamps could not be accepted.

"It never occurred to me they couldn't use stamps," he said, laughing. "But they use a frank, and of course they wouldn't want stamps. All the government could do would be to sell the stamps over again, and it might as well get the money in the first place."—Indianapolis Star.

Dog That Barked Seissors. A dog named Rover, owned by George Rose of Christopher, Cal., has been taught to turn the wheel that furnishes the power for his master's scissors grinding machine. Rover gets on the wheel of his own accord and merely reads, reads, while his master sharpens scissors and knives.

Government Whitewash.

Take half a bushel of undressed lime. Slack it with warm water and cover during the process to keep the steam. Strain the liquid through a fine sieve or strainer. Add a peck of salt previously well dissolved in warm water and three pounds of ground red bait to a thin paste. Stir in boiling hot but a pound of powdered kerosene whitening and a pound of oil which has been previously dissolved over a slow fire and add five gallons of hot water to the mixture. Stir well and let it stand for a few days, covered up from the dirt. It should be put up hot.

The plot of the mixture will cover a square yard properly applied, says the Breeder's Gazette. Small brushers are best. It is nothing that can be done with a brush outside of fence work, and it reveals its brilliancy for years.
Yellow matter may be put in and made of any shade—Spanish brown, yellow ochre or common clay.

Pig Wisdom.
Give the little pig extra feed in a separate inclosure as soon as they can be induced to eat.

Give them whole oats on a platform and sweet milk in a small clean trough.

Keep them growing so that they can be weaned as soon as possible.

If managed properly the pigs should not receive a check in growth at weaning time.

They should gain even faster than when fed through the dam.

As soon as the pigs are weaned the sows should be turned with the male and then just by themselves in a good clover pasture.

If in good pasture they will need very little extra feed until time for the second litter.

With good management the second litter is counted as clear gain—Farm

present.

The teachers county institute commenced next Monday with Prof. A. S. McKenzie, of Kentucky State University as instructor. The institute this year bids fair to be the best ever held in the county. An interesting program has been arranged and Prof. McKenzie is one of the best instructors in the state. The teachers of the county are cooperating with the Superintendent in an effort to have the most successful institute in the history of the county. Two public entertainments will be held during the week.

The local baseball team has not been very busy during the past week. On last Friday a game was to have been played with Lebanon. A number of people were on the ground anxious to see the game, but were disappointed as Lebanon failed to show up.

Messrs Harry Shultz and

A large crowd was present at Texas last Saturday where a very successful educational meeting was held. Prof. Geo.
Colvin, who recently held several educational meetings in Whitley county, delivered a lecture which held the attention of the large audience present.
Prof. J. Lewis Harmon of Bowling Green Business University who is one of the State's greatest educators, delivered a very eloquent speech. The meeting was attended by a large number of men, women and children, who enjoyed the speeches of these two talented educators.
The Texas school will be taught this year by Prof. C. O. Durham who was the teacher there last year and gave universal satisfaction.

Checks for another distribution to the growers of Washington County on the 1900 pooled tobacco were received from Winchester last week, and are now being delivered in the same manner as heretofore on presentation of contracts to the clerk of the Board of Control. The contract may also be mailed to either of the local banks who will attend to the collection of the amount due on them.

The distribution is being made on a basis of 5 per cent on the appraised value of the winter tobacco, and 10 to 12 per cent on summer tobacco, which we are authorized to announce was the plan adopted by the committee selected by the growers, last county court day for the purpose of making the equalization.

New Bridge Completed

It will be welcome news to the people who travel the pile between Springfield and Bard-town to know that the new bridge across the Big Beech Fork at Fredericktown has been completed. The old wooden bridge which spanned the river until the spring of the present year, had been condemned, at first there was some thought of repairing it, but happily for the future taxpayers of this and Nelson county, the idea was abandoned and a new iron bridge

Notice To Holders of State Warrants.

This office is informed that in the future the Auditor will discontinue sending Treasurers checks for amounts due claimants, but instead will mail his warrant to claimants, thereby causing them the necessity, and danger of misdirection and possible loss in the mails, by remailing the warrants to the Treasurer for payment.

As a matter of safety and convenience to those receiving warrants, as well as to this office, I would suggest and advise that ALL WARRANTS sent out by the Auditor be deposited with your local bank for collection.

It will probably not be possible to pay all warrants just yet, but those that we are unable to pay will be returned with checks for those that are paid.

If the above suggestions are complied with, payments can be made with more promptness, and possible loss through the mails reduced to a minimum.

Very Truly,
E. FARLEY,
Treasurer.
